Potential benefits, risks and limitations of psychological services have been explained to me as well as alternative procedures or interventions if they exist.

Confidentiality

I understand that my conversations with my therapist will almost always be confidential. However, there are some important exceptions to this. I understand that by law, my therapist must report actual or suspected child, elder, disabled person or spouse abuse to the appropriate authorities. In addition, the therapist has a legal responsibility to report to the proper authorities or other persons when a client is a threat to his/her own or someone else's safety. Other reasons that information may not be kept confidential include (but are not limited to) when the client consents in writing, or if a court of law issues a subpoena and information is required to be released by law. Cases are also reviewed during Peer Review and in Clinical Supervision. In the case of some mandated referrals, a referral source may be informed whether the client has kept the appointment and if they are compliant with treatment recommendations. I, the client, will always be made aware if this is the case.

HIPAA

I understand that this consent form acknowledges my right to privacy and the limitations on my privacy. Attendance

I understand that regular attendance, a willingness to be open and honest and follow through on treatment suggestions will produce maximum benefits, but that the final decision on what to do is always up to me. In addition, I understand that I am free to discontinue treatment at any time. A termination session may be requested in order to provide for any continuing areas of concern.

I am aware that while psychotherapy interventions offer potential benefits, they also present possible risks, such as uncovering painful or uncomfortable feelings of sadness, guilt, anxiety, anger or frustration as aspects of my life are discussed.
